Draw an editorial cartoon either for a newspaper that supports the Queen or for a newspaper that does not support her. Is your cartoon set in the days while the trial was going on, or after the Archbishop has made his decision and the government has changed?

Newspaper Activity

Write two news stories about the results of the trial of the Queen using a propaganda style. Write one from the perspective of those who were against the Queen and another from those who were loyal to the Queen. Remember you must use only facts but convey the difference through style changes.

Or

Write a story about how relations with Ruritania will change under the new government.

Skill Builder

Conduct a lesson on homonym and antonym. Have students select words from the chapter and list a homonym or antonym for each one.

AUTHOR'S NOTES

The Archbishop was a lot nicer to the wicked Queen than were the Grimm Brothers or even Disney. But there is good, though not binding, historical precedent for exile rather than execution for nobility, so I didn't entirely chicken out!

After I laid out the plot for this story and was researching the era, I discovered a historical coincidence: In 1455, two German princes were kidnapped. The villains split up, and as the leader was taking one of the princes through the forest to escape, he ran into a collier who proceeded to thrash him soundly and free the royal youngster!
